DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention. It is not clear how applicant's invention is manufactured. According to the spec, pages 6-7 and figure 5 the core is formed using a first and second body. How are the first and second bodies produced? The production of the cover is also disclosed in the same manner. How are the two eight sections forming the cover produced? The pieces appear to be rigid. If so, were they molded in this eight-shape configuration?

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Nakamura et al (5,779,564) in view of Pitsenberger et al. Nakamura discloses a golf ball comprising a core and a dimpled cover. Nakamura does not disclose the method of making the golf ball using the standard baseball/softball eight-shape. However,

Art Unit: 3711

Pitsenberger teaches the method of making a game ball using eight shaped pieces. (abstract, fig 1). In regards to applicant's claims, the final product or golf ball produced appears to be no different from what is disclosed in the primary reference; Nakamura. If the method of production such as the eight-shaped pieces produces a patentably distinct golf ball applicant is encouraged to claim the structural differences of the final product and not the differences in the methods of productions. For example, applicant claims a core produced by connecting two eight shaped sections as shown in figures 5. However, after connecting the two pieces the final core is a standard sphere no different from what is disclosed in the prior art. The same is true for applicant's cover formed from two eight-shaped pieces. Furthermore, the eight-shaped construction is not new in the sporting industry as shown by the secondary reference, Pitsenberger. The eight-shape configuration is well known for providing proper balance during flight for game balls such as softballs, baseballs, and tennis balls. One of ordinary skill in the art would have modified Nakamura with Pitsenberger by using the eight-shape configuration to enhance the flight characteristics.
